We would like to have your views on a wide variety of issues and questions that people are talking about at the moment. In connection with each, we offer two options, one on each side of the argument. Please indicate which of the two comes closer to your own view.

The Serious Fraud Office investigation into allegations that British firms had bribed officials in Saudi Arabia...

The Government was RIGHT to halt the investigation: continuing it would have cost a great deal, might not have resulted in any criminal charges or convictions and would have alienated Saudi Arabia, possibly with a heavy loss of export orders and jobs 28

The Government was WRONG to halt the investigation: it is essential to uphold the rule of law and to deter British firms from bribing corrupt foreign officials even though continuing the investigation would have cost a great deal and might have resulted in the loss of export orders and jobs without leading to any criminal charges or convictions 38

Don't know 34

'Cash for Honours'...

Although no one knows for sure at this stage, my impression is that the Government and the Labour Party probably did indicate to wealthy individuals, in some way or another, that if they donated or lent money to the Labour Party they might expect to receive in return an honour such as a knighthood or a peerage 64

Although no one knows for sure at this stage, I very much doubt whether the Government and the Labour Party were so foolish and corrupt as to indicate in any way to wealthy individuals that they might expect to receive an honour in return for donating or lending money to the party 15
